DOR Begins Move To Century Center

ATLANTA - On the evening of Aug. 1, the Georgia Department of Revenue will begin moving to its new location at 1800 Century Center Boulevard in Dekalb County.

"That evening we will disconnect the communication lines in the Trinity Washington Building, which link to the servers that hold much of the state's taxpayer database," explained Revenue Commissioner T. Jerry Jackson.

"We are taking actions to minimize any degradation of service to taxpayers on Thursday, Aug. 2, and Friday, Aug. 3," Jackson said. "We anticipate that the lines will be in place and fully operational on Aug. 6.

Information will be available on the Department's Internet web site at www2.state.ga.us however, the e-mail links will not be operational.

Jackson encouraged anyone who believes they might normally need the Department's assistance Aug. 2-3 to do so in advance if at all possible.

Approximately two weeks after the communication lines are relocated, the Department will begin a phased movement of the remaining equipment and personnel to the new facility. All elements should be moved by late December.
